

A Call to Befriend Mother Earth

"...And in that day men will be weary of life and they will cease to think the Universe worthy of reverent wonder and of worship...But, when all this has befallen, then the Master and Mother God, the first before all, will call back to the right path those who have gone astray, He will cleanse the world of evil. And thus, He/She will bring back Their world to its former aspect."

Asclepius III, ibid., pp. 305-07.

At a time when armies of men and women are being culled quickly from all the herds, there is a heavenly call from a recruiter, far above the relationships of mortal men, that is calling us to Her service in these great days of adventure and global ascension. From all walks of life, people are waking up to a different view of their own mortality and the possibility that we may not all escape earthly changes, even if we escape the akashic lessons of our own individual lives. I marvel at the strength and majesty of Earth even as She changes course and puts into action a new plan for this Life Zone. It is time to see these changes as part of our ascension process, not only as a result of our ignoring our environmental duties and privileges, but as a reason some of us might have incarnated at this time. Life on Earth is changing, forever; and we need to individually and collectively make sure we are ready for this next journey.

Plato spoke and wrote about a place on Earth called Atlantis. It was everybody's pipedream for the "future" and for some, it only existed in the past. Whenever "paradise" is brought up today, there are still references made to places like Atlantis and Eden. It seems we cannot catch up with these times in history, nor can we seem to create them. And yet, how many times have you heard Hawaii, Bali, Fiji and Ireland referred to in just this way? Who wouldn't give their eyeteeth to live in such places of peace?

I say Atlantis is not so much a place we see on Earth as a place in our hearts where we receive the abundance and love of Gaia and in return, live our lives compassionately and with greater love for all living things. Looking at global warming, pollution, animals disappearing forever from the face of the planet and more areas destroyed by drought and natural catastrophes, seems to still be our bogeyman after thousands of years. And yet, instead of slowing down the process in a meaningful way, we actually have stepped up the destruction. It doesn't take an enlightened Al Gore, a man whose life is forfeit now, only to be propelled for the good of humanity, to point out what every person in their gut already knows. Our way of life, our way of limited thinking, our greed and lack of love for humanity and her children are now becoming the very disease that will eliminate many of us. So, why do we not act?

I have a theory that agrees with a concept put forward by a very wise man named, Nelson Mandela. I believe we are afraid of our own divinity, ultimate success and ascension and scared to death about sticking our necks out and reaching for eternal life. These periods of decline provide the fodder for growth. It is from these ashes that all our phoenixes will rise. These periods of time produce heroes, transform animals into different species but, also allow us to grieve the passing of many ideas, governments, medicines and religions that could not live up to Mother Earth's new plan for the future. I always wonder if God is sitting and waiting for us to really understand The Plan? Is He/She waiting for us to take over so They can have a well-deserved vacation? Just a bit of levity for the article but, its part of the process on Earth that our kids take over after we reach a certain older period in our lives so, as above, also below... Even as we destroy, we rebuild but, who are the architects of this building process within humanity? It is you and me, of course.

I looked around my office the other day and realized that it was a mess. I also noticed after moving 6 months ago that I still had not unpacked vital books and lovely possessions which make my life so much more wonderful and comfortable. This move is the 5th in 4 years and I am beginning to get the message that my Mom knew so well. "You can't take any of this with you when you go." This ancient phrase is not just about greed folks, it's about living today, investing your time and love in things that are real like, the Great Lakes and your children and an inspired government that was meant to live on for thousands of years.

Stuie Wilde talks a great deal about going into “the morph” these days. It is that altered reality that allows us to really capture the significance between what we hope will happen in the future versus what truly is happening. The morph is a place in our higher consciousness where we can re-dream the conditions on the planet by cleaning our own houses up first. What I can imagine, I can create. We need to stay in the morph long enough every day to see how beautifully teamwork can improve all our lives, to experience an unearthly compassion that we can bring to this reality through our deeds and words and, we need to bring back the healing to ourselves and to the Earth, now.

Sound like a pipedream? Are Heaven and paradise simply an unreachable apex that we on Earth can't taste before crossing over? You know, we all contain pieces to these puzzles. Every one of us can dare to dream and translate those dreams into action. Who can't spare 30 seconds a day to visualize a clean, sane planet? How many of you place white light around yourselves everyday but, never extend that auric cocoon to cover the Earth as well? The above quote by Aesclepius relates to the fall of Egypt: a civilization for its time which led the way in technology, religion and the arts. We can still see the greatness of that culture but, we also have noticed it is surrounded by desert. It is barren of life abundant and yet, we know that civilization had great understanding of God's Truth in all things. Was it not the source of The Emerald Tablets of Thoth? Did it not produce the jewels that are contained in The Egyptian Book of The Dead? This civilization, in its own wise way, tries to teach u every day about how important the road of life is to the road of death. Are they not one in the same? We must long for life on this planet as we do life eternal. It is an important formula for renewing our vows to God.

As we explore our spirituality in this amazing 21st century, we have to see that Heaven and Earth are so entwined that there is no turning back now in our exploration of co-creating with The Divine. We cannot fail at our own great tales of glory. The Earth and Her children are worthy of our love, compassion, deeds and true comfort. Please begin visualizing a rich green and blue, empowered planet filled with happier more charismatic people who just love to reach out and meet one another. Remember, as you become a more loving child of Earth, the energy of growth you send Her will propel positive change around the globe of man. We must unite behind Mom, the innocence of children, behind cleansing and healing our own wounds, so, like The Wounded King in the Grail myths, we change the course of history by figuring out lessons together, one hero at a time.

The seasons will change, animals, plant-life and humans will come and go, but, Mother Earth is here to stay and paradise is worth sticking your neck out for in this eternal flow. As above, so below. Muck up Earth and so do you do the same to your concept of Heaven? When you understand the manifestation of your thinking all the way into Heaven, life on Earth may become much more precious.

To all the Eves on our planet,
